1. The first thing I noticed when I stepped out of the train was the cold. It was a sharp, biting cold that I had never experienced before. The air was like ice, and it stung my face. I pulled my coat tighter around me and shivered.
The ground was covered in a thin layer of snow, and the trees were bare and dark against the pale sky. I looked around, trying to get my bearings.
The station was a small, simple building with a few people waiting. I saw a man in a long coat and a hat, and a woman in a dark dress. They were looking at their watches, and I saw that it was late in the afternoon.
I walked towards the entrance of the station, my feet sinking slightly into the snow. The door was open, and I stepped inside. The interior was warm and dimly lit. There were a few benches and a small counter. I looked at the clock on the wall, and saw that it was 5:30. I had just arrived in a new city, and I was alone.
